Dupont names new product development manager

By Jennifer Mitchell

DuPont Professional Products named Dr. Bruce Steward product development manager for the turf and ornamental market. Steward will serve DuPont's Midwest and West territories in the United States, and he will be responsible for conducting product development research studies with DuPont pipeline active ingredients. He will also provide technical service for DuPont's existing product line.

Steward has more than 25 years of industry experience, working in agriculture, consumer and professional turf and ornamentals pest management and product technical support. He holds a bachelor's degree in entomology from Oklahoma State University. He earned both his master's degree and doctoral degree from the University of Arkansas.
